

MELISSA KUEHNE

Melissa Kuehne is a program manager at the Institute for Local Government (ILG). She runs ILG's Leadership and Governance Program which helps local governments build the foundations of good government, develop leadership skills and increase public trust. Prior to joining ILG in December of 2013, she worked as staff for a member of Congress, with a California business improvement district and a collaborative policy center in Washington State.

She has over 10 years of experience in outreach, project management and communication and has helped convene stakeholder groups around flood control, homelessness and environmental issues. Her educational background includes a B.A. in Political Science from UC San Diego and an M.P.A. from the University of Washington's Evans School of Public Affairs.
